

LIFE

New book surveys Metro Manila's architectural landmarks

'Architectural Guide Manila' features the built heritage of the Philippines' capital region with writings by architects and heritage advocates

Author Bianca Weeko Martin. Photographs courtesy Goethe-Institute Philippinen

Edgar Allan M. Sembrano

Published on: Jun 24, 2024, 00:20

Weeko Martin's Architectural Guide Manila presents in style the built heritage

The recently launched book 'Architectural Guide Manila.'

Published by the Berlin-based DOM Publishers, the book was launched on 11 May at the Manila Metropolitan Theater with a panel discussion featuring the author; architect Gerard Lico who contributed an article on brutalism and post-colonial architecture; architect and curator Peter Cachola Schmal; and Patrick Kasingsing of Brutalist Pilipinas. They discussed heritage conservation projects and efforts in Manila as well as its built environment. Following the launch was a tour of Manila facilitated by the group Renacimiento Manila.

EXTERIOR view of SM Aura Premier, the shopping mall that houses Chapel San Pedro Calungsod on its upper roof deck.

Apart from Lico's essay, representative buildings from the Spanish to the American periods are discussed starting off with Intramuros including the Manila Cathedral and Fort Santiago, the historic Bahay Nakpil-Bautista, Paco Train Station, Luneta Hotel, the National Museum complex, and the Far Eastern University campus. Also featured are churches and chapels, old and new and structures of tropical modernism such as the Government Service Insurance System Complex in Pasay City and the Pacific Star Building in Makati City.

While many of the featured building are already written about in many other publications, the book's strength lies on the feature on Metro Manila's modernist and post-modernist structures. These structures are located in the cities of Pasay, Makati and Taguig.

Aside from Lico, the book's other contributors include Singaporean scholar Joshua Tan, Aya Maceda of New York's Parsons School of Design, Edson Cabalfin of Tulane University in Louisiana, Neferti Tadiar of Barnard College in New York, and Kasingsing.

Offering a fresh take on the architectural milieu of Metro Manila, the book is a perfect guide for a weekend stroll or an afternoon coffee in the Philippines' capital region.

Show Comments

BUSINESS

LIFE

Follow Us

About Us | Privacy Policy | Contact Us

2000

Powered by Quintype

